Aline, yang menemukan porselennya dan bersedia datang ke Place de la Bastille pukul dua belas malam, meski Paris begitu rawan. Gadis macam apa itu? Memangnya dia sudah begitu putus asa sampai-sampai tidak peduli pada keselamatannya sendiri? Terlepas dari hal-hal menarik yang dia temukan di diri orang itu, Sena menyimpan misteri, seperti mengapa Aline diajaknya bertemu di Bastille yang jelas-jelas adalah bekas penjara, pukul 12 malam pula? Dan mengapa pula laki-laki itu sangat hobi mendatangi tempat-tempat seperti pemakaman P è re Lachaise yang konon berhantu? Setiap tempat punya cerita. Dan inilah sepotong kisah cinta yang kami kirimkan dari Paris dengan prangko yang berbau harum. Enjoy the journey, EDITOR -GagasMedia-

Encyclopedia of the Exquisite is a lifestyle guide for the Francophile and the Anglomaniac, the gourmet and the style maven, the armchair traveler and the art lover. It ’ s an homage to the esoteric world of glamour that doesn ’ t require much spending but makes us feel rich. Taking a cue from the exotic encyclopedias of the sixteenth century, which brimmed with mysterious artifacts, Jessica Kerwin Jenkins ’ s Encyclopedia of the Exquisite focuses on the elegant, the rare, the commonplace, and the delightful. A compendium of style, it merges whimsy and practicality, traipsing through the fine arts and the worlds of fashion, food, travel, home, garden, and beauty. Each entry features several engaging anecdotes, illuminating the curious past of each enduring source of beauty. Subjects covered include the explosive history of champagne; the art of lounging on a divan; the emergence of “ frillies, ” the first lacy, racy lingerie; the ancient uses of sweet-smelling saffron; the wild riot incited by the appearance of London ’ s first top hat; Julia Child ’ s tip for cooking the perfect omelet; the polarizing practice of wearing red lipstick during World War II; Louis XIV ’ s fondness for the luscious Bartlett pear; the Indian origin of badminton; Parliament ’ s 1650 attempt to suppress Europe ’ s beauty mark fad; the evolution of the Japanese kimono; the pilgrimage of Central Park ’ s Egyptian obelisk; and the fanciful thrill of dining alfresco. Cleverly illustrated, Encyclopedia of the Exquisite is an ode to life ’ s plenty, from the extravagant to the eccentric. It is a celebration of luxury that doesn ’ t necessarily require money. BONUS MATERIAL: This ebook edition includes an excerpt from Jessica Kerwin Jenkins's All the Time in the World.

In a tribute to the far latitudes, Gretel Ehrlich travels across Greenland, the largest island on earth. All but five per cent of the island is covered by a vast ice sheet, an enduring remnant of the last ice age. Despite a uniquely hostile environment, it has been inhabited continuously for thousands of years. Greenlanders retain many of their traditional practices: some still hunt on sleds made from whale and caribou with packs of dogs; others fashion harpoons from Narwhal tusks; and entranced shamans make soul fights under the ice. Ehrlich mixes stories of European anthropologists who have recorded the ways of the Inuit, with artists who have lived briefly on Greenland's fringe in order to try to capture its extraordinary pure light. She travels across this unearthly landscape in the company of men and women who have a deep bond with it, and with them she discovers the realm of the Great Dark, ice pavilions, polar bears and Eskimo nomads.

“ The English language bows deeper to Amis than anyone else. ” The Daily Telegraph (UK) A master not only of fiction but also of fiercely controversial political engagement, Martin Amis here gathers fourteen pieces that constitute an evolving, provocative and insightful examination of the most momentous event of our time. At the heart of this collection is the long essay “ Terror and Boredom, ” an unsparing analysis of Islamic fundamentalism and the West ’ s flummoxed response to it, while other pieces address the invasion of Iraq, the realities of Iran and Tony Blair ’ s pallid departure from Downing Street. Amis ’ s reviews of pertinent books and films, from The Looming Tower to United 93, provide a wide-ranging survey of other responses to these calamitous issues, which are further explored in two short stories: “ The Last Days of Mohammed Atta, ” and “ In the Palace of the End, ” narrated by a Middle Eastern tyrant ’ s double whose duties include epic lovemaking, grotesque torture and the duplication on his own body of the injuries sustained by his alter ego in constant assassination attempts. Whether lambasted for his refusal to kowtow to Muslim pieties or hailed for his blunt common sense, Amis is indisputably a great pleasure to read – informed, elegant, surprising – and this collection a resounding contemplation of the relentless, manifold dangers we suddenly find ourselves living with.

Intern is Sandeep Jauhar's story of his days and nights in residency at a busy hospital in New York City, a trial that led him to question our every assumption about medical care today. Residency—and especially the first year, called internship—is legendary for its brutality. Working eighty hours or more per week, most new doctors spend their first year asking themselves why they wanted to be doctors in the first place. Jauhar's internship was even more harrowing than most: he switched from physics to medicine in order to follow a more humane calling—only to find that medicine put patients' concerns last. He struggled to find a place among squadrons of cocky residents and doctors. He challenged the practices of the internship in The New York Times, attracting the suspicions of the medical bureaucracy. Then, suddenly stricken, he became a patient himself—and came to see that today's high-tech, high-pressure medicine can be a humane science after all. Now a thriving cardiologist, Jauhar has all the qualities you'd want in your own doctor: expertise, insight, a feel for the human factor, a sense of humor, and a keen awareness of the worries that we all have in common. His beautifully written memoir explains the inner workings of modern medicine with rare candor and insight.
